HEL Peninsula: Naval Objects and Miscellaneous Information.
(September 1951 and as in text)

- I. Key to attached sketch showing the location of naval installations on HEL Peninsula.

Legend.

- A. Entrance gates to the prohibited area. The gate at the JURATA end is guarded by a "WOP" sentry, while naval sentries keep watch at the gate nearer HEL Village.
1. Naval base HEL.
2. HEL fishing port.
3. Accumulator Charging Station for Submarines.
4. Naval and "WOP" observation post. The building is brick-built with a tower; under it there is a concrete shelter. Nearby there is an underground ammunition store built by the Germans during the war, exact location not known by informant.
5. Gun positions of coastal artillery.
6. Signal mast for fishing boats.
7. An airfield constructed by the Germans. In June 1951 repairs were carried out on this airfield by naval engs. and on 26th June 1951 some trials (take-off and landing of fighter planes) took place here. No aircraft on this field at present.
8. Naval barracks.
9. Store-house under construction.
10. Naval NCO's dwelling quarters.
11. Electric power station consisting of ground floor level and basement.
12. Ordnance stores.
13. Torpedo storage-rooms and workshops.
14. Deep underground ammunition dump.
15. Newly laid telephone line.

II Miscellaneous Information.

1. CO of HEL area - Comd. MAKULEWICZ (Soviet officer)
2. The narrow-gauged railway is serviced by an electric engine.
3. Naval N.C.O.'s state that there are radar installations on the peninsula. [redacted] survey of the whole peninsula did not reveal any aerial masts or similar installations.

4. Up to the end of June last, a narrow path enclosed on both sides by barbed wire fences, lead from HEL Village to the beach bordering on the open sea. This part of the beach was then available to all holiday-makers. Now this path has been abolished and strangers are no longer allowed to go beyond the boundaries (built-up area) of the village.
5. The passage on the only concrete road leading from HEL Village to JURATA requires a special permit issued by Naval H.Q. in GDYNIA.
